

“Monex Nighter” Trading Service for Mobile Phones

TOKYO, August 6, 2007 -- Monex Beans Holdings, Inc. announces that its subsidiary, Monex, Inc. (“Monex”), will enhance its “Monex Nighter” service (night time stock trading) to be traded through mobile phones from August 13, 2007.

The launch of this service will enable investors to trade stocks through the “Monex Nighter” tool even in situations where they don’t have access to PCs such as when they are outside or on their way home. The transaction fee for trading via mobile phones is same as that for PCs – 500 yen (inclusive of taxes) for each transaction regardless of the number of shares.

“Monex Nighter,” is the first private trading system (PTS) for individual investors in Japan which was launched by Monex in January 2001, was the first such system in Japan aimed at individual investors and currently allows investors to trade shares in more than 3,000 brands of stocks from 17:30 to 23:59 on weekdays. Under the system, the price of each stock is fixed at the closing price of the day and its simplicity has made the service popular among customers such as those unable to trade during the daytime and investment beginners.

Monex is committed to enhance its services to attract more customers.
